The editor of the Haya Sentunel was here about throe weeks ago, and after thousely interviewing and inspecting all the baguios and back places of a suspicious stature, writes them up in flourishing style. From the tone of his "article" our first impression was that the unsupinistic acid youth must have went too deep in the speaks of, and went away in the condition of the monkey who got his hall too locar the coals. He says:

And a bour all being. Dodge is the beardward of Kaussar, the secondition of the monkey who got his hall too locar the coals. He says:
